

Cable companies should have to provide cable customers access to competing broadband Internet service providers.